Patter And Chatter
By S. E. KIMBER.
Not So Bad.

MEN who never have learned to trust sit in their nooks and grumble; Judges, they tell us, are all unjust. And the law is a hopeless junkie; Men whose efforts are caused by greed.

THE world is not a place of cheer and gladness; Tell us the world grows cheerless. But still there are men with the faith they need For being superb and fearless.

BITTER old men who are short of pride Say that the world's ungrateful; Glory and honor, they say, have died. Pleasure, they think, is hateful. Still they are ordering soldiers to kill. And refusal to slay is treason! But the world grows better and lovelier still With every succeeding season.
